

TURKS CROSS THE BALKANS TO RE-ENTER THE LAG

Had Crossed at Chanak Saturday Night—Their Ultimatum Calling for Guarantee of the Return of Thrace Had Expired at 5 P. M. Saturday—The Kemalists Ceased to Advance When the British Commander Threatened to Open Fire If They Progressed Further—The Turks Retreated Their Steps Without a Shot Being Fired—Constantinople Pulsates With Excitement and Expectancy—Allies Have Taken Precautionary Measures Anticipating the Possible Attempt at Invasion of the City by the Turks.

Constantinople, Sept. 24.—(By The A. P.)—The British officials announce that a Turkish force of 1,500 cavalry, which crossed the neutral zone at Chanak Saturday night, retired today on Balaclava, following a meeting at 4 o'clock this morning between the commanders of the Turkish and British forces. No shots were fired. The Turks retired under a white flag.

The Turkish stopped their advance when the British commander threatened that a further forward movement would cause the British to open fire.

The Turkish ultimatum allowed until 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon for guarantees regarding the return of Thrace, and it was because no guarantees were forthcoming that the Turkish cavalry crossed the border.

TURKISH INVASION OF THE NEUTRAL ZONE

London, Sept. 24.—A strong force of Kemalists cavalry crossed the neutral zone near Balaclava Saturday, according to the Constantinople correspondent. The ultimatum of the British government, calling for a guarantee of the return of Thrace, was not accepted. A meeting was arranged for six o'clock Sunday morning between General Sir Charles Harbord and Turkish officials. The British general Harbord is believed to be the purpose of making similar representations. It is believed that because of allied acceptance of the Turkish ultimatum a friendly understanding will be reached.

The Chanak correspondent of the Times sends a story of the Kemalists' violation of the neutrality. A British cavalry patrol on Sunday morning, Sept. 24, found 250 regular Turkish cavalry in the village of Sarachak, 25 miles south of Chanak. The Turkish commander professed to be unaware that he was in the neutral zone, but declined to move without orders, although warned that further encroachment might result in serious consequences. The British withdrew but remained in observation.

In the evening another 500 Turks were seen advancing from the north, and an additional body coming from Balaclava, whereupon a British officer rode forward with the British flag and asked to speak to the Turkish commander, who politely informed him that he was in the neutral zone, but declined to move without orders, although warned that further encroachment might result in serious consequences. The British withdrew but remained in observation.

The British then instructed the Turkish commander at Chanak in telephone to withdraw his forces. The Turkish commander refused to do so, and the British then ordered the Turkish commander to withdraw his forces. The Turkish commander refused to do so, and the British then ordered the Turkish commander to withdraw his forces.

Prominent Meriden Man Commits Suicide

Archer B. Jennings, Superintendent of the Jennings & Griffin Manufacturing Co.

Meriden, Sept. 24.—Archer B. Jennings, 50, superintendent of the Jennings & Griffin Manufacturing company, in Yaleville, near here, committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver in the chest early this evening. The body was found under a tree in a small grove not far from his home in Bradley Park by his brother, Lloyd E. Jennings.

The revolver was clenched in the right hand and a small mirror was in his left hand. Mr. Jennings, who had been very nervous and who had complained of headaches for the last week or so, had taken prominent part in civic affairs for a number of years. He was president of the chamber of commerce here, and a member of the Meriden Visiting Nurses' association. He was also a member of the Meriden Building and Loan association.
